

Spice & Flavouring Technology

Baked Coatings

Spicy coatings for snacks

NOT FRIED

Compared to conventional snacks, coated snacks are becoming increasingly popular. However, one of the disadvantages of these snacks is that they have a noticeably high fat content due to the frying process. Moreover, seasoning residue on hands and clothing are considered as unpleasant. An innovative FUCHS technology now puts an end to these disadvantages:

Advantages of „baked coatings“

- Lower heat impact, as the snacks are baked, not fried
- No fat except for the natural fat content
- Seasoning mix sticks to the product, not to the hand
- Different colour variations possible (free of E numbers)
- Declaration of native starch, dextrose, maltodextrin and salt; plus individual seasoning
- Salt content can be individually adapted to customer needs
- Intensive crunch

Variants

- Honey mustard
- Paprika
- Wasabi
- Onion sour cream
- Sweet Christmas almonds
- ... and whatever you wish

STRONG ADHESION TO THE PRODUCT

PRODUCT-FRIENDLY MANUFACTURING

PRODUCTION WITHOUT ADDITIONAL FAT

WE ARE CERTIFIED
IFS
(International Food Standard)
—
BIO certificates
—
Kosher
certificates

Baked Coatings

Honey mustard

The new system for fat-reduced crunchy snacks

Peanuts, almonds, cashews as well as seeds, chickpeas and maize are alternately coated with 8-12 layers of a liquid adhesive compound and a dry starch compound.

Any water contained vaporises in the oven, and the starch expands. The result is a crispy hull. Thanks to the added seasoning, this tasty hull serves as an intensive, crunchy low-fat coating.

If requested, the seasoning can be applied anew in another process step in order to provide a more intensive flavour.

FUCHS baked coatings merely contain the natural fat content of the product. They do not stick to the fingers but only to the nut and taste crispy and crunchy.

Only native starches, dextrose, maltodextrin and salt plus the respective individual seasoning are declared. Of course, the seasoning and salt content can be individually adapted to customer needs.

Paprika

Wasabi

Onion sour cream

Sweet Christmas almonds

The applications and combinations of seasonings serve as examples only. We would be pleased to create a customised version for you. Ask us!